

AFRICA'S WARM HEART

It is impossible to travel to South Africa and not be struck by the broad smiles, crushing handshakes and enthusiastic exclamations of "Sanibonani" that greet you wherever you go. Yes my journey through this country's roads is filled with memories of wild, jaw-dropping landscapes under bright-blue skies; enthralling wildlife and the magnificent Indian Ocean, glinting in the sunlight. Something else overrides them all: the sense of welcome I experience throughout my travels taking the gospel to the Zulu people.

Striking a Balance

Sister Thombe Nakho continues to be most grateful for the new shelter she was given earlier this year. After the two room house was completed, her brother moved in. His life was sordid; one of drunkenness and fornication, offering up animal sacrifices in ancestor worship. This past month Thombe kicked her brother out, along with his numerous girl friends. She told him she was a Christian and that she would not allow herself or her daughter of three years to be exposed to such evils. Her decision and action has resulted in great hardship, as her brother was providing government grant money for the family. In addition, as a result of her life before she became a Christian, Thombe is suffering from A.I.D.S. Sharra and I were shocked by her appearance on Sunday. Her medication was also being supplied by her brother. We are hoping to help her with the food and medication she requires.

"A coming together of people to share an experience"

Shoes were ordered for the needy Christian families and should be arriving via DHL next week. Thank you for making it possible for us to make such a difference in the lives of these who have so little, but who love God and live for Him.

South Africa's reputation as the "Warm Heart of Africa" is no exaggeration: there really is nowhere more welcoming and friendly. If you're not careful, it will creep into your soul.

Many thanks,
Scott and Sharra
